

Strategic thinking for senior teams

A powerful one-day workshop that gives senior and executive teams a common language for strategic thinking to elevate and focus their collective decision-making.

Overview

This workshop will get senior and executive teams on the same page about what strategic thinking is and provide them with a common language for making it happen.

The focus of the workshop is introducing a framework for thinking strategically about any strategy or business decision. The framework will provide the basis of a shared language that teams can take forward and use to shape their discussions, focus their decisions on what matters most, and achieve their desired impact.

The workshop will also provide the opportunity to reflect on the components of strategic thinking capability and what it means to be a strategic thinker both individually and as a team.

Teams will leave the workshop positioned to continue their strategic conversations and feeling equipped and energised.

Who should attend:

This workshop will be a game-changer for any senior team who:

- Wants to develop their strategic thinking capability as a team.
- Sees an opportunity to lift their performance and focus their discussions with a common language for strategy.
- Knows how easy it is to get caught up in the complexity of day to day issues and reactive decision-making.
- Wants more clarity in their strategic decisions.

Workshop package:

- Scoping session(s) with team lead.
- Full-day team workshop 9am to 4pm.
- Optional follow-up debrief/coaching session with team lead.

Delivery options

Delivered in-person, in-house or off-site.

About

Kia ora, I'm Nina Field

I'm NZ business psychologist with a passion for enhancing leadership capability and performance. I have spent the last 20 years working with people and how they think, act and lead. I spent 11 of those years as a Military Psychologist optimising people performance in demanding environments. During that time, I made my foray into strategy and that got me curious about the psychology of strategic thinking and started me on the path to my work today. My programmes are about equipping leaders and leadership teams to play their best, and most strategic game, in a demanding and uncertain world. I take a unique holistic approach to the development of strategic capability. I come simultaneously from a psychology and strategy angle, weaving the two together to encompass development of the person as well as the task. I aim for personal and team transformation through a combination of learning, self-insight and reflection - I don't just teach strategic thinking, I create strategic thinkers and strategic teams.

Visit www.ninafield.co.nz for more detail.

✉ nina@ninafield.co.nz ☎ 021 86 89 87

"Nina's one-day strategic thinking workshop helped us to put a framework around our thinking, get clarity around our goals, and stay focused during a strategy session. The framework was valuable because it put rigour around the outcomes. The leadership team loved Nina's engaging style, and we have already practiced what we learnt - and it worked! "

- Harley James, Group Director, Defence & National Security, Beca Applied Technologies Ltd.